

Event: Encore Career TeleSummit for Women 50+
Theme: Re-inventing yourself takes knowledge and planning

Subject: Are you unprepared like Diane Keaton?

Hi there, first name,

Lin Schreiber of Revolutionize Retirement.com here just finishing my morning coffee with my husband...

Today we got to talking about one of our favorite comedies from the 80's—"Baby Boom". Remember that one? Diane Keaton suddenly inherits a 14-month old baby girl and then loses her high-powered executive job in New York City.

She decides to purchase a cottage in Vermont to escape her New York life and reinvent herself. In short time, she discovers her idyllic cottage needs a lot more work than she thought. And she wasn't altogether prepared for the "quiet" country life, pouring out her private frustrations to a 'doctor'—only to discover he's a veterinarian.

It got me thinking about the many savvy, self-reliant women I coach, just like you, who are looking to reinvent themselves in their next stage of life...

Time and time again, I hear women say they'd really like to find work that sings to their soul, touches their spirit, ignites their passion and leaves them feeling fully alive.

But, they are not altogether prepared to find that perfect Encore Career. They don't know where to begin, they're not sure how to convert their passion into a profitable enterprise, they aren't clear on how to finance their new venture, and they are paralyzed by the idea of 'marketing'.

You too might be wondering how you can figure out the best path to a meaningful Encore Career—one that will be a true expression of what you have to offer the world. And you worry about wasting precious time and money going down the wrong path.

Well, worry no more...
