

SUBJECT: Feeling lost and alone?

Hey there, first name,

Rebecca Matter here of the Wealthy Web Writer.

Recently I took a ski trip to Tahoe with my husband. Boy, did we fall in love with our GPS that weekend...

You see, it was a last minute decision to squeeze in a weekend of skiing before the Web Copy Intensive in Las Vegas.

The house we rented turned out to be deep inside a complicated stretch of twisting roads on the side of a mountain—the kind of roads you MUST have four-wheel drive or chains to travel.

With limited time for skiing, we wanted to take the quickest and easiest path to the house and slopes to make the most of the money we'd invested in this trip.

It was very dark—no moonlight or streetlights—and frankly, I was a bit scared. But I was confident our GPS would guide us safely to our destination.

I knew we wouldn't waste any time, or precious gas, traveling down the wrong roads or going in circles getting nowhere fast. Even the soft British voice of the GPS helped me feel less isolated and alone.

I got to thinking about the many online copywriters I work with, just like yourself, who are searching for the fastest route to online copywriting success ... kind of like having a GPS for their copywriting career.

You need a solid career roadmap and guide that will help you navigate the many opportunities available to web writers.

The scariest part for many web writers is how alone and isolated they feel as they try to figure out the right path to take.
